BELOIT TURNS OUT TO GREET SOLDIERS BACK FROM BORDER

John M. Whitehead One of Leading Speakers at Banquet Given in Honor of Company L.

Beloit, Wis., Jan. 20.—Members of Company L, First Wisconsin regiment, for the first time in more than six months, are today enjoying home with a fuller appreciation of home's comforts than ever before. The company arrived from Chicago on a special Northwestern train between five and six o'clock last evening. A crowd that filled the depot yard and overflowed into the streets for two blocks in every direction was on hand to cheer and welcome the soldiers back from the border. It was a most heart-stirring welcome and many a mother and sister, wife and sweetheart wept tears of sheer joy.

Three bands—the Boys' band, the City band and Leaver's band—were on hand to give emphasis to the gladness of the welcome, with thrilling material strains.

The boys formed in line and marched proudly and joyfully to the army where they broke ranks and greeted relatives and friends. The company was then adjourned and on the top of the flag mast was placed a searchlight which made "Old Glory" stand out with shining brilliancy.

A banquet was served to the members of the company at the First Presbyterian church by the citizens. A. F. Ayer, a captain of a former Beloit militia company, presided as toastmaster, and J. W. Adams extended the official welcome for the city.

Prominent among the speakers was Hon. John M. Whitehead of Janesville, whose son, Dr. Philip Whitehead, was a private in Company L. His subject was "Our President, the Commander-in-Chief." Other speakers were Captain Buck, Major Rossmann, W. O. Hansen, G. W. Morrison, J. H. McNeil, Rev. W. P. Leek and E. C. Wheeler. Mrs. Ramsey, who had two sons in the company, was the only woman speaker. At the close of the banquet, T. L. Wright presented each member of the company with a Beloit municipal flag, in a most impressive ceremony.

Sheboygan, Jan. 20.—That the second Wisconsin infantry may return in the near future, is believed from telegrams that two members of Company "C," now home on furloughs, received yesterday, extending their furlough thirty days without their having requested it.

Co. B, at Ft. Atkinson. The entire population of the city of Fort Atkinson turned out Friday afternoon to welcome home the soldiers of Company B. As the soldiers passed in company, the spectators, men, women and children, waved their hats and cheered.

Led by the Fort Atkinson military band, the soldiers marched through Main street to the armory where they were dismissed. Every building along the line of march was decorated with the stars and stripes. Monday night the soldiers will be guests of the city at a big celebration. There will be a banquet, followed by speeches.

More than a score of men teachers in the schools of Rock county, practically all of them high school instructors, principals and superintendents, met at the high school building today for an annual conference. The meeting was called by County Superintendent O. D. Antisdol. The features of this afternoon's program was an address by State School Inspector Terry of Madison on the subject of "Mathematics." A banquet, prepared by the domestic science department of the local high school, will be served this evening after which the visitors will attend the Janesville-Delavan basketball game.

MEN ACQUIRED OF USING FERRET WHILE HUNTING

A verdict of not guilty was handed down yesterday afternoon by the jury in the case of Harry Siegle, Sam Brown and Thomas Goodman, charged with using a ferret to hunt rabbits. Evidence brought up against the defendants was not sufficient to warrant a conviction. William Imman, on whose farm the men were hunting, testified that he saw the nose of a ferret protruding from the pocket of Brown's coat. At the time, however, Imman was driving past on a wagon and was at least five rods away from Brown. No other person saw a ferret in the possession of the defendants.
J. W. Crawford was brought into the municipal court this morning on a charge of drunkenness; he was fined three dollars and costs.
Charles Munson, up on the same charge, was unable to pay a fine of $7 and costs, and so took ten days in jail.

Chicago Markets.
Chicago, Jan. 20.—Hogs advanced 5 @10c yesterday and sold at the highest average prices since the Civil war times. The cost on the hoof figured about $11.03. The top was $11.25, 32c below high day last September, when the range in prices was much wider than at present.
Cattle trade had a slow tone at Thursday's decline, which effaced advances scored the first half of the week in most classes. Declines since Wednesday have been due in large measure to a shortage of cars on eastern roads, handicapping shipping demand. Prompt recovery of the loss is indicated.

Sheep and lambs closed at 25@40c higher than a week ago and on the highest basis in trade history. But promises to be hard fought, but matured muttons, owing to their scarcity and high pelt values, are scheduled to work higher.
Average price of hogs at Chicago was $11.03, against $10.95 Thursday, $10.65 a week ago, $7.23 a year ago and $6.73 two years ago.

Slumpy Close in Cattle.

A slumpy close featured a high week in the cattle market. Beef and butcher stock below choice class lost their week's earlier advances and thin stuff closed to a point lower than a week ago. Veal calves finished firm at the week's 25@30c advance and are at record levels. Quotations:
Choice to fancy steers $11.35@11.75
Poor to good steers $8.30@11.25
Yearlings, fair to fancy $8.50@11.50
Fat cows and heifers $7.00@10.30
Canning cows and cutters $5.19@6.50
Native bulls and stags $5.75@8.75
Feeding cattle, 600@1,100
lbs. $5.85@8.90
Poor to fancy veal calves 10.00@14.75
Hog Values Advance:
Under a healthy shipping demand and a supply below expectancy hogs advanced @10c. An $11.25 top was made and the bulk sold from $10.90 to $11.15. Packers fought the upturn.

For Men Who Prefer Clear Havana

"As Mild as a Good Havana Can Be"

Ruy Lopez is one of the oldest brands of clear Havana Cigars on the market today and is known from coast to coast by connoisseurs of good cigars.

For a strictly high grade, Clear Havana Cigar we feel confident that this brand will cheerfully supply the wants of the most fastidious taste.

Ruy Lopez cigars are made for those who know the quality of a clear Havana cigar like the Ruy Lopez or similar brands showing workmanship and blending of this high grade tobacco.

Made in all the popular shapes to sell at retail for 10c each and higher.

CONTENTAR CIGARS made by the manufacturer of Ruy Lopez to sell for 5c. They are made especially for The Wisconsin Tobacco company and enjoy a ready sale in this territory. Short leaf Havana filler with clear Havana wrapper, a most delightful 5c smoke.

Marie Antoinette Cigars Par Excellence

A mild, mellow, cool smoke. Excellence is the watch-word in the manufacture of Marie Antoinette Cigars. It embodies that Rich Mildness for which the smoker craves.

It is the clear Havana tobacco, used in making Marie Antoinette Cigars, that when rolled into a cigar retains its flavor and character; in fact gains in mellowness as it ages, and acts upon the palate in such a manner that the smoker will enjoy each and every inhalation, and brings regret when the last puff has finished the cigar.

Marie Antoinette Cigars are made by E. Kleiner & Co., Inc., of New York City, who enjoy a nation-wide enviable reputation as manufacturers of high quality cigars.

Ten Cents will buy a very good quality Marie Antoinette Cigar and you can buy higher priced ones if you wish. The quality is excellent in every grade.

CIGARS FOR GENTLEMEN OF GOOD TASTE, briefly

the foregoing statement summarizes the ambition of this company, to buy and distribute to the trade cigars that gentlemen will enjoy and continue to buy for themselves and for their friends.

During the short time that we have been in business in the city of Janesville we have built up an enviable trade on the lines of cigars mentioned in this advertisement.

Men who have been confirmed smokers of one brand of cigars for years have switched to one or another of these cigars and have been glad they changed.

Many retailers who were a bit dubious at first about stocking a new line now call us up and ask us to hurry these cigars to them, saying at the same time that the demand is growing all the time and that the smoker is asking for these cigars.

In calling attention to the above facts we do so with a justifiable pride. In addition to these there are three other things we pride ourselves on—the cigars we distribute, the reasonable prices at which we sell them and the quality of the tobacco contained in them.

Years of experience have taught us how to buy cigars of the best quality—we will have no other kind.

You who have smoked these cigars know them as puffs of solace and delight from one end to the other.

You who haven't smoked these cigars yet will undoubtedly do so before long and we respectfully direct your attention to the following list of dealers who handle them.

La Roi Cigars

The Most Popular Cigar of This Blend in Southern Wisconsin

The manufacturers of this well known cigar have spent years of time and much money with the aim and desire to perfect the mildest and most pleasing blend of tobacco. The result is the La Roi Cigar. That it fulfills the ambition of the manufacturer to make a mild pleasing blend is evidenced by the decision of thousands of smokers in this territory who have hailed with acclaim this excellent cigar and who do not hesitate to back their judgment by buying and smoking La Rois in enormous quantities.

La Roi has a distinctive and gratifying flavor; it is very mild, four or five can be smoked without feeling any ill effects, the aroma is most pleasant and at the same time you get the full benefit of the best selection of Havana tobaccos.

La Roi Cigars sell for 10c to 2 for 25c, in five different shapes, range enough to suit any smoker.

Little La Roi is of the same quality, mild and pleasant, but sells for 5c.

Coin Bond 5c Cigar

Invincible Shape,
Domestic Blend

Bucher & Bucher of Dayton, Ohio, who make the Coin Bond Cigar are recognized by not only the manufacturers of other cigars but also by the inveterate smokers of a domestic cigar, as manufacturers of one of America's most satisfying and best 5c sellers.

After smoking one Coin Bond Cigar, the aroma and flavor impels the continuation of this brand.

The Coin Bond is a hand-made, domestic cigar, Pennsylvania and Havana filler, Wisconsin binder and Sumatra wrapper.

The tobacco trade concedes that Bucher & Bucher are making in the Coin Bond the most popular and successful invincible 5c cigar on the market today. The verdict of smoker's, too, bears this out.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

If you can keep your head when all about are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you, but make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and be not tired by waiting;
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies, Or being hated, don't give way to hating;
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise.

If you can dream and not make dreams your masters;
If you can think and not make thoughts your masters;
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster And treat those two imposters just the same;
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken, And stoop and build 'em up again with your worn-out tools.

If you can make one head of all your woes And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose and start again at your beguiling loss,
And never breathe a word about your loss;
If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew To serve your turn long after they are gone,
And to hold on when there is nothing in you Except the Will which says to them: "Hold On."

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue, Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgetting minute With sixty seconds' worth of distance run—
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a MAN, my son.—Rudyard Kipling.

That little word "If" takes on importance when attached to a great principle, and Mr. Kipling has applied it to a list of things which have to do with destiny. A careful reading of this list will disclose the fact that it covers the field of endeavor. It is so full of helpful thought that it is worth reading and reading again.

The Kingdom of Nature, God's silent Kingdom, is filled with object lessons, intended for our enlightenment and encouragement. There are no drones in this kingdom and no discouraged denizens. Poise and determination are the watchwords, and from the violet, which gains a foothold in an obscure corner, to the great oak which defies the tempest, out in the open, the same spirit is manifest.

The sturdy pine, which dot the mountain side, are not ornamental, but they are hardy specimens which continue to stand on and live in spite of hard surroundings. The hand which dropped the seed, and the crevice which received it and caused it to sprout and grow, is the hand which rules the world, and the sturdy pine finds congenial environment in the stormy sea.

The animal kingdom is endowed with much of the same spirit. Its inhabitants of the air and water are self-supporting and no word of complaint is offered. The land is richly populated by inhabitants of this realm, and animal life seldom suffers until the hand of man interferes, and then the suffering is born so patiently that it is seldom appreciated.

The wounded dog hides away for days neither seeking nor expecting sympathy. It buries its sorrow and suffering so completely that it never mends the pleasure or happiness of the world about him, and if he dies he dies alone. The animal kingdom is God's heroic kingdom, and the battlefields of the old world are dotted today with specimens of these fallen heroes.

It is an old saying that it takes all kinds of people to make a world. The statement is true, and because the variety is so great, it is not at all surprising that failure is more common than success.

The realm of man is the only realm in which individuality is distinctive. A thousand trees in a pine forest are copies of each other; a thousand sheep in the fold look exactly alike, and a flock of birds or a school of fish have no distinctive marks.

Not so in the realm of humanity. A battalion of troops in review may be dressed alike. The measured step may be like the step of one man, but a glance at the face discloses the fact that every man is an individual unit. Of the two most lonesome places on earth, the vast, uninhabited desert, and the great city, the latter has no rival. Not for lack of people, because the streets are thronged with them, but because the familiar face is not there.

The characteristics which have to do with personality are not so numerous as the distinguishing marks by which a face is recognized, because the endowment of every life contains many things in common.

The good Lord who permitted us to be created, was as impartial as He could be with the material at hand. He gave to every soul which came into being, everywhere, the spark of Divine life which finds expression through the conscience. This is why the people of all lands recognize right and wrong, and possess a desire to worship Deity in some form.

He also gave to every life a mind capable of thought and development. He also endowed this mind with a will, which makes it a free moral agent, the choicest heritage which man possesses.

The development of the mind and directing of the will is delegated to human agencies, and success or failure depends largely on the intelligence and faithfulness of these agencies.

While it may be true, as the forefathers stated, that "All men are created free and equal," if it is, then the freedom and equality stops with creation. The rank and file of humanity in many lands are serfs, and freedom in our own land is more or less of a travesty.

So far as equality is concerned, something depends on birth and much on environment. The Utopia of socialism is a picture of equality, which provides that the holder-carrier shall carry the load for a month and then change work with the banker for a month. Too visionary to think about.

Opportunities are abundant, in this fair land, but they represent all kinds of opportunities adapted to all kinds of wants. Some of them mean a chance to work for bread, and then a Godsend after long enforced idleness. Others contain a promise for the future and these are eagerly sought by young people with ambition. There are all sorts of conditions in life and all kinds of workers, but the prizes in every department are won by the people who possess in large degree the qualities of mind and heart so fully outlined by Mr. Kipling. They are within the grasp of every intelligent mind and worthy of the most consecrated ambition.

HEN AND JASPER
I like the way Henry Hyde,
He lives his life quite at his ease;
Whatever befall, whatever betide,
Is sure to please.

All life Hen is gay and fair,
All men to him are honest, true,
He finds his fun most anywhere,
He's never blue.

Consider now, old Jasper Jones,
At vice and wickedness he rails;
He thinks about life's cares and moans,
He sighs and wails.

The world abounds in sin, says he,
Injustice, Greed and Want are
His life;
So many miseries there be
In this sad life.

And Jasper Jones is high of brow,
He's studied much since early
He's seen the truth.

Wise men who hear his views allow
He sees the truth.
Hen's views are seldom sought, in
He's soothed.

Why, there's as simple as a boy's,
Old Jasper sees in life the Truth,
Hen sees the Joys.

He Banished It
"My dear," said Mrs. Pjones to her lawful spouse, "I wish you would speak to the cook, Bettina. I fear she has been drinking."

Mr. Pjones giggled in a suspicious fashion.
"My dear," sez he, "I will look into this matter. But first, he it agreed, that if she can say, 'Susie's sewing socs for soldiers'—if she can say that then your fears are unwarranted." To this, oddly enough, Mrs. Pjones was agreed. With her husband.

"If liquor has entered this home," said Mr. Pjones with stress on the "I," "I shall be the one to banish it." This, with indignation.

Mr. Pjones then hastened to the kitchen, Bettina's bower and rectory.

A few moments elapse in the action of the piece. Mr. Pjones is now seen to be descending the stairs, having made a detour, and in a rather vacillating manner.

"My dear," he says, "Bettina, you shoosies showing shock—do you know what I said. See shays it perfectly!"

EXPECT LOAN ACT
TO BETTER LIVING CONDITIONS IN U. S.

By Frank R. Wilson of the Federal Farm Loan Bureau.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Since the farmer of the United States is the food producer for a good share of the world, the granting of cheaper credit to the farmer for the purpose of enlarging his opportunities and cheapening his cost of production is likely to have an important part in the solution of the great cost of living problem.

The records of the United States census office show a constantly increasing trend toward the cities. Each year shows that there are more persons to be fed whereas the acreage that has been producing food and the number of hands to cultivate these acres have not increased in the same proportion.

It is patent therefore that to meet this increasing demand for food more farms must be established to provide homes for more producers and the land now under cultivation must be farmed more carefully and with more and better equipment.

Provision for cheap capital for land purchase and farm development will mean at least a partial realization of these ideals.

If the farm loan act will reduce the percentage of tenantry in the United States it will have accomplished a great deal toward putting American agriculture on a more substantial basis.

More than half of the farms of the United States are now in the hands of tenants. The tenant is a transient farmer and the temporary nature of his operations prevents him from operating at maximum capacity. Short leases make it out of the question for tenants to be large meat producers. The tenant is usually a grain farmer, and in many sections of the country a single cropped. He is engaged in handling the fertility of his landlord's soil to market.

The farm owner conserves the fertility of his soil by marketing his crop through his stock and reducing the fertility to the land. A nation of land owners means a nation with a constantly increasing capacity to produce food for its people. A reduction of farm tenantry and a substitution of a class of landowners means improved social conditions in the country and a more permanent form of country life.

Since the farm loan act provides how the borrowed money shall be spent and limits its use to purposes that will make farms more productive, it is bound to have an elevating influence on the standard of agriculture in the United States.

Every borrower under the farm loan act makes it a part of his contract that he will use the money either to reduce existing indebtedness or in some way that will contribute to greater production on the same number of acres.

Since the formation of these small groups of farmers is the foundation upon which the farm loan system is built, it is apparent that this legislation will foster the spirit of co-operation among farmers. When farmers put their mortgages together for the sake of cheaper money it is reasonable to presume that they will form the habit of co-operation in other problems of common interest.

The present farm loan indebtedness of the United States is probably approximately four billion dollars, and the average interest rate now charged is between 8% and 9 per cent. If the farm loan act would reduce the interest rate of the United States by 4 per cent it would mean a financial saving to the farmers of between one hundred and fifty million and two hundred million dollars per year, and this estimate of saving takes no account of the fact that high interest rates have reduced the volume of farm loan indebtedness far below what it will be when a lower rate is established.

High interest rates and unfavorable terms of farm mortgages have been a serious handicap to farm development. Curtailing farm production has taxed the consumer as well as the producer because the limited production of food gave an increased advantage to the food speculator.

The farm loan act is, in a measure, revolutionary. It stands for equality of opportunity. It says that the aggressive farmer who goes out into new lands to enlarge the sphere of production is entitled to the same opportunities as the man who operates in a territory already developed. It puts the public interest above the interest of an individual. It takes individual profit out of the business of financing food production.

CUTICURA HEALS

On Head and Neck. Itched Terribly, Scratched and Became Sore Eruptions. Lost Rest At Night. Had to Have Hair Clipped.

"I suffered from eczema for a number of years and I tried many different remedies but with no effect. The trouble started with itching, then a rash broke out mostly on my head and on my neck. It itched terribly and caused so much scratching that it became sore eruptions and I lost a good deal of rest at night. I had to have my hair clipped tight to my head and the rest became very lifeless and dry."

"Then I read of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and was advised to try them so I sent for a free sample. I found the sample such a help that I got several cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of the Ointment which I used until I was healed." (Signed) Miss Florence Clarke, Dodge Center, Minn., Oct. 7, 1916.

Side Lights ON THE Circus Business

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr
Robbins and Later
Forepaugh Circus.

(Copyrighted.)
I promised you some two weeks ago to tell you something of the great Outdoor Showmen's banquet, held at the Astor hotel in New York City on Dec. 27. I will first give you a letter written by an old friend of mine, with whom I traveled back in the early days, by the name of P. F. Albee.

"I regret very much that I will be unable to be present at the dinner. I know of nothing that would give me greater pleasure than to go back forty years the fourth of last July, when I joined the Barnum show in Lowell, Mass. It doesn't seem so long, but what wonderful changes in circus and theatricals generally since that time! A great many of the old and worthy pioneers have passed away and their places have been taken by young and energetic showmen who are developing circus business into one of the highest class and most expensive businesses like theatricals in the profession of entertainment."

"I spent twelve years with different circuses—Barnum's, Barnum, Bailey & Hutchinson's, Forepaugh's, Burr, Robinson, Van Amburgh's, Norris, the Great London, Nathan and Lane—and I fully believe my success in theatricals since that time is due entirely to the schooling I received during my circus career. From that time on I have been devoting most of my time to vaudeville. The great colleges of the world produce many great scientists, lawyers, professional men of all kinds, but do not produce that great essential to success, the study of human nature, the great education of travel and the fitting out of a man to meet all conditions of life, as does the early training with a circus. Ed Kohl used to say, 'Albee and I didn't go to universities of book learning; we went to the P. F. Barnum college' and I have never regretted it. I look back with pride to that wonderful education and to those I met there—nature's men, broad-gauged and broad-minded. To those who will remember there that night I send my deepest respect and my sincerest wishes that your gathering will only be the commencement of a close relationship of all men who cater to the public's amusement, no matter in what field, and that the object of this dinner will be fully attained, and I hereby pledge my support to assist in any action you may take for the security and the betterment of our business, both for the manager and the artist."

And they do tell that of the 841 guests who were registered, the table was one kick registered and that was by Chin Chin, the tiny elephant belonging to Rhoda Roy, who insisted on having a small bottle of champagne poured over her head. It was absolutely impossible for this was to be a cold water banquet, seemed to make the heat of it and the banquet went on. It's all over now, and it will certainly take forever in the annals of outdoor show business. No one will deny that the Outdoor Showmen of the World's Christmas dinner and the huge ascor was the greatest and grandest even of its nature ever staged by showmen and for showmen. It was not only artistically successful but what is more, it was financially successful. Certainly was grand and glorious. Showmen from all parts of the United States attended. The Showmen's League of America, under the capable guidance of its president, John H. Warren, came on for the banquet fifty-two strong, and also brought with them their mascot, Chin Chin, Rhoda Roy's baby elephant. Clarence Kierham went to the expense of over $2,000 to bring on his entire executive staff from San Antonio, and C. H. Acquisti and Henry B. Ancher brought over forty men from Philadelphia. In addition to these groups, individual showmen of repute and standing came from all nooks and corners. Al. B. Barnes crossed the entire continent to come from Venice, Cal.; George Loose and wife came from Jacksonville, Fla.; as did also old Steve MPA and wife. In all 841 plates were served at the banquet and practically every one of this number represented a showman or his wife or lady friend. Incidentally it is noteworthy that Clarence Worham brought over thirty members of his staff, occupying over two tables, including Steve Woods and wife. It is noteworthy that in no time in the past have showmen come so far for a mere banquet and ball. Though no advance information was given, it appears as though they almost sensed that the time for the protective organization was ripe, and that they had double purpose in making the expensive journey to the Empire City. All agreed that the trip was well worth their while and it is most gratifying to the executive committee which had the ball and banquet in hand that everybody was pleased and satisfied. In conclusion it is only proper to once more remark that it was a most genuine success in every way. The showmen from all over the country who attended deserve sincerest thanks. Chairman Frank P. Sheehan and the executive committee, who staged the event must also be congratulated, and the Showmen's League of America is also to be most heartily thanked for the support it so generously provided. It is a compliment to John B. Warren and his hustling band of associates that they should have carried the propaganda into the east and signed up over 150 new members. No matter if you are afflicted with indigestion and you never cared for wondrous after dinner wit and humor, nevertheless those who attended the banquet and ball of the Outdoor Showmen of the World got more than their money's worth by the excellence of the entertainment furnished under the able leadership of Ottokar Beate, an metropolitan baller, fame, and Henry Meyerhoff. Hats off to them! The collection of artists on the bill comprised some of the best in vaudeville, and just to show that the occasion was full of versatility all of them were from without the domain of the white world, and the fact that they were doing their stunts before the best collection of good fellows in the amusement world gave them additional zest. Helen Gott of the Metropolitan Opera House started the ball rolling when the call came from the master of ceremonies to push back the tables and watch the fun. She sang two high class operatic selections and was rewarded with a hearty round of applause. Then Caliente, the ball of the harpist of the Imperial Russian theatre, gave the high quality of the entertainment another boost by rendering a beautiful harp solo that was entirely new with the occasion. It went over with a bang and was applauded to the echo. Then, by way of variety, Torcom Dezzian sent his excellent baritone voice swelling through the hall by rendering two excellent solos. Paolo Martucci was then introduced and added further laurels to his reputation as a pianist extraordinary by the artistry in which he manipulated the keys of a big concert piano. He was followed by Carl John, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera House, and his solo selections brought down the house. His rendition of "Gralszaehum, from Lohengrin, was a master piece, and Carl showed by his attitude that he had never enjoyed singing more in his life. The next number was from Mlle. Dazie. She was only in view just three minutes and she put every ounce of the strength of her alluring little anatomy into her enigmatic and fast performance. She not only was on her own toes all the time, but had the whole crowd on their saiso, and proved that she is a genius in the art. The big smash hit of the evening was by James McIntyre and Tom Heath, assisted by Otto Johnston, took possession of the boards through the courtesy of the Messrs. Shubert. Their blackface stunt kept the crowd in an uproar, and every once in a while they would work in a purely extemporaneous local crack at some one in the crowd that was side-splitting. Their work correlated the big waxed ballroom with utter abandon. Many times it seemed as if they would meet with disaster because of the smoothness of the floor, but they more than proved able to meet the exigencies of the occasion, and they did themselves proud. Tom Rankine announced each member in his usual debonair manner. When the outdoor showmen could go outside their own field and obtain a $10,000 program of features for their dinner is a remarkable tribute to the high esteem in which they are held by the other branches of the amusement world. And when it is considered that not a single drop of intoxicating liquor was used during the dinner, it was a further deserving indication of their high ideals and the morale of the outdoor showmen was made manifest.

NEW MYERS THEATRE.

Il Trovatore De Luxe.
That is what one of our foremost critics said of the co-star production of Il Trovatore which comes to Myers Theatre on Sunday night, January 28. This company, which features Joseph F. Sheehan, America's foremost tenor, and Mlle. Nelli Gardini, called the Geraldine Farrar of France, includes such artists as Elaine De Sellen, Florentine St. Clair, Harold J. Geis, Robert Evans and a number of others. It is probably the highest priced cast ever heard in a single performance outside of the big cities and one thing is certain, nowhere has so notable a cast been heard before at prices within the reach of the average theatre goer.

That Mlle. Nelli Gardini should have insisted upon Il Trovatore for her first American tour was not wonderful at all, for she had demonstrated fully that she is one of the world's greatest Leonoras. That she was fortunate in being able to associate herself with Joseph F. Sheehan is evident inasmuch as Mr. Sheehan is the foremost exponent of Manrico which America has produced, and critics say he is doing the greatest work of his career, probably for the reason that for the first time he has found a Leonora capable of making him extend himself.

These co-stars have surrounded themselves with a specially selected company of European and American artists, a great singing chorus and augmented orchestra, and the tour which is limited to twelve weeks on account of Mlle. Gardini's return to France, is one succession of triumphs.

No matter how many times you have heard Il Trovatore, don't miss the treat of this performance de luxe. It's one of the musical treats of a decade.

SPECIAL OPERA ORCHESTRA

A STORY OF RASPUTIN.
(By Paul Holmes.)
Chapter One:
L'Verne In Paris.

Paris than eighteen, walked on slowly. Paris in war time was a different Paris from the gay city of peaceful days, but still it held its attractions to the man newly returned from the trenches of the north.

And it was from the trenches that Louis's life was to come. Of two-and-twenty, he had been through had been his reward for some particularly vallant services which he had rendered in the battle of Roilleaux. And now there stretched before him these two months, with what they might contain. Joy, perhaps, but not the joy of the trenches. That was what he looked forward to, and that certainly he deserved it all. Such things, however, are not usually found in war-stricken Paris. Had he but known it, he might have found more ern story wherein it shows the workings of inauspicious forces in the underworld of contemporary life. The contrast of splendor with gaunt realism and the great moving forces of ancient warriors makes "Intolerance" an achievement in every respect different from anything that has ever before been shown in the theater. It is difficult to realize the interest in what is one of the tremendous scenes in and around the ancient city of Babylon, in the stirring events in the streets of Paris during the reign of Charles IX; in the Tisot-like "recreation" of old Judea or in the frenzied thrills of the modern story. It is futile to even attempt to convey any idea of the splendor and magnificence of the scenes that are created. Only those who witness its wonders can begin to realize its marvelousness. Running through the threads of the story is a musical score interpreted by a large and carefully selected symphony orchestra.

Nan of Music Mountain

By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

De Spain ignored his question by asking another: "Did you find him?" Lefever shook his head. "Not a trace; I covered Main street. I guess Bob was right. Nobody home here, Henry."

"Nobody we want."

"Nothing going on?"

"Not a thing. If you will wait here for Bob, I'll run over to the office and answer those telegrams."

De Spain started for the stairs. "Henry," called Lefever, as his companion trotted hastily down. "If you catch up to her, kindly apologize for a fat man."

But De Spain was balked of an opportunity to follow Nan. In the street he ran into Scott. "Did you get the story?" demanded De Spain.

"Part of it."

"Was it Sassoon?"

Scott shook his head. "Deaf Sandusky. That man Sandusky. Bob smiled a sickly smile—'doesn't miss very often. He was bothered a little by his friends being all around you.'"

The two regarded each other for a moment in silence. "Why," asked De Spain, "boiling a little, 'should that d—d hulkling brute try to blow my head off just now?'"

"Only for the good of the order, Henry," grinned the scout.

"Nice job Jeff has picked out for me," muttered De Spain grudgingly, "standing up to these Sleepy Cat barrooms to be shot at. Is he the fellow John calls the butcher?"

"That's what everybody calls him, I guess."

The two rejoined Lefever at the head of the stairs and the three discussed the news. Even Lefever seemed more serious when he heard the report. Scott, when asked where Sandusky now was, nodded toward the big room in front of them.

Lefever looked toward the gambling tables. "Well, go in and look at him." He turned to Scott to invite his comment on the proposal. "Think twice, John," suggested the Indian. "If there's any trouble in a crowd like that, somebody that has no interest in De Spain or Sandusky is pretty sure to get hurt."

"I don't mean to start anything," explained Lefever. "I only want De Spain to look at him."

But sometimes things start themselves. Lefever found Sandusky at a table. At his side sat his partner, Logan. Three other players, together with the onlookers, and the dealer—whose tumbled hair fell partly over the visor that protected his eyes from the glare of the overhead light—made up the group. The table stood next to that where Tonison, white-faced and impassive under the heat and light, held the chair.

Lefever took a position at one end of the table, where he faced Sandusky, and De Spain, just behind his shoulder, had a chance to look the two Calabasas men closely over. Sandusky again impressed him as a powerful man, who, beyond an ample stomach, carried his weight without showing it.

De Spain credited readily the extraordinary stories he had heard of Sandusky's dexterity with a revolver or a rifle. That he should so lately have missed a shot at so close range was partly explained now that De Spain perceived Sandusky's small, hard, brown eyes were somewhat unnaturally bright, and that his brows knitted every little while in his effort to collect himself. Sandusky's brown shirt sprawled open at the collar, and De Spain remembered again the flashy waistcoat, fastened at the last button-hole by a cut-glass button.

At Sandusky's side sat his croaky in all important undertakings—a much smaller, sparer man, with aggressive shoulders and restless eyes. Logan was the lookout of the pair, and his moving glance lighted on De Spain before the latter had inspected him more than a moment. He lost no time in beginning on De Spain with an insolent question as to what he was looking at. De Spain, his eye bent steadily on him, answered with a tone neither of apology nor pronounced offense: "I am looking at you."

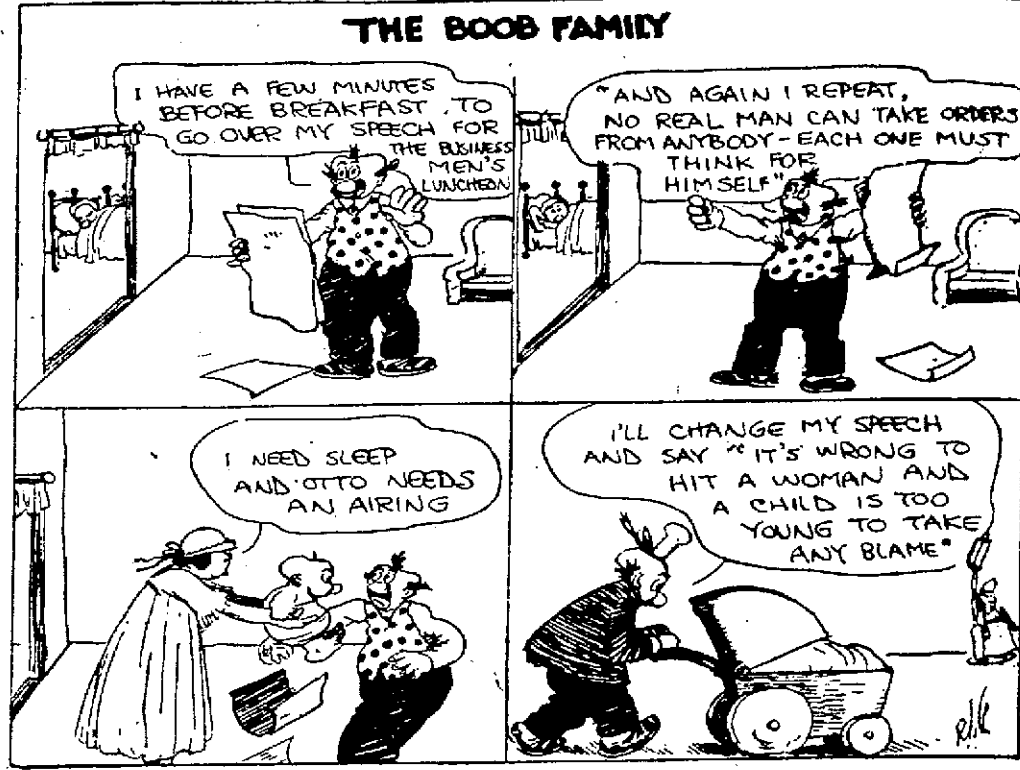

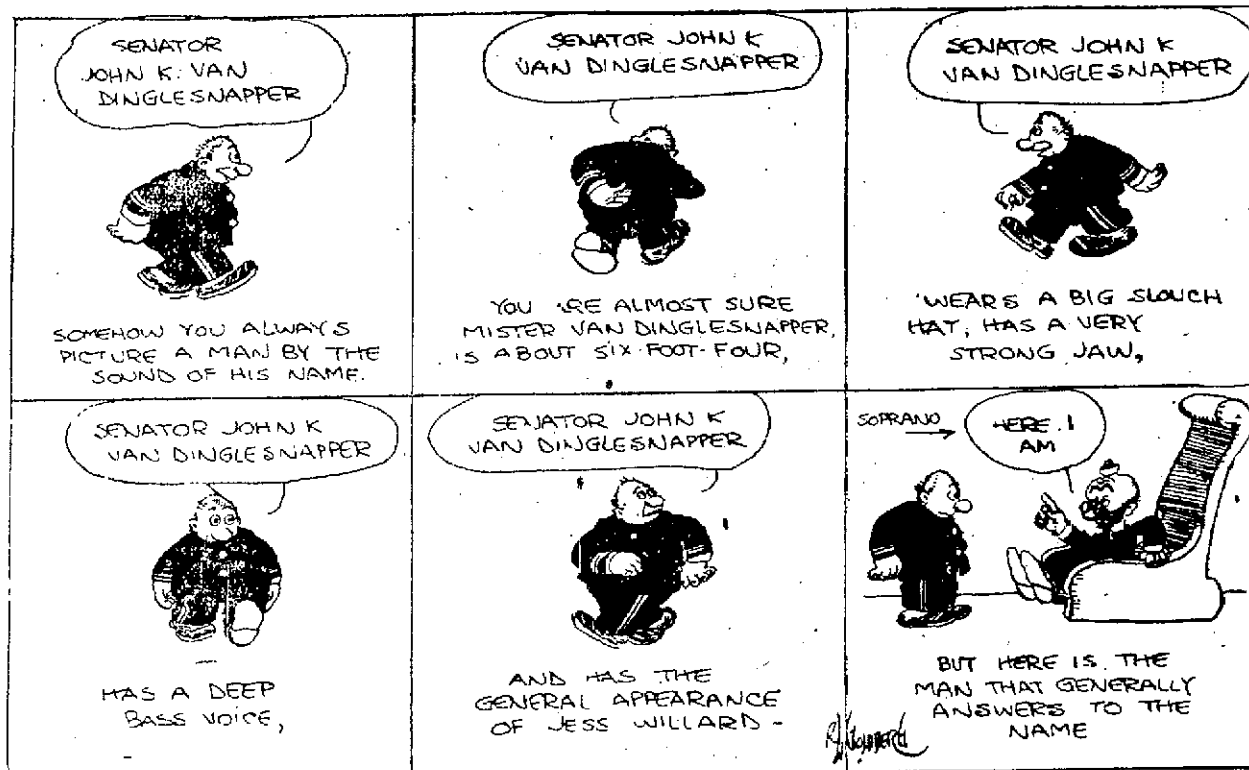

Lefever hitched at his trousers cheerily and, stepping away from De Spain, took a position just behind the dealer. "What are you looking at me for?" demanded Logan insolently.

De Spain raised his voice to match exactly the tone of the inquiry. "So I'll know you next time."

Logan pushed back his chair. As he turned his legs from under the table to rise, a hand rested on his shoulder. He looked up and saw the brown face and feeble smile of Scott. Logan with his nearest foot kicked Sandusky. The big fellow looked up and around. Either by chance or in following the sound of the last voice, his glance fell on De Spain. He scrutinized for a suspicious instant the burning eyes and the red mark low on the cheek. While he did so—comprehension dawning on him—his enormous hands, forsaking the pile of chips with which he had been for a moment busy, flattened out, palms down, on the table. Logan tried to rise. Scott's hand rested heavily on him. "What's the row?" he demanded Sandusky in the queer tone of a deaf man. Logan pointed at De Spain. "That Medicine Bend dick wants a fight."

"With a man, Logan; not with a cub," retorted De Spain, matching insult with insult.

EVEN THE PAGE-BOY IS OFTEN SURPRISED.

"Maybe I can do something for you," interrupted Sandusky. His eyes ran like a flash around the table. He saw how Lefever had pre-empted the best place in the room. He looked up and back at the man standing now at his shoulder, and almost between Logan and himself. It was the Indian, Scott. Sandusky felt, as his faculties cleared and arranged themselves every instant, that there was no hurry whatever about lifting his hand; but he could not be faced down without a show of resistance, and he concluded that for this occasion his tongue was the best weapon. "If I can," he added stiffly, "I'm at your service."

De Spain made no answer beyond keeping his eyes on Sandusky's eyes. Tonison, overhearing the last words, awoke to the situation and rose from his case. He made his way through the crowd around the disputants and brusquely directed the dealer to close the game. While Sandusky was cashing in, Tonison took Logan aside. What Tonison said was not audible, but it sufficed to quiet the little fellow. The only thing further to be settled was as to who should leave the room last, since neither party was willing to go first. Tonison, after a formal conference with Lefever and Logan, offered to take Sandusky and Logan by a private stairway to the billiard room, while Lefever took De Spain and Scott out by way of the main entrance. This was arranged, and when the railroad men reached the street rain had ceased falling.

Scott warned De Spain to keep within doors, and De Spain promised to do so. But when they left him he started out at once to see whether he could not, by some happy chance, encounter Nan.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Cup of Coffee.

He was willing, after a long and bootless search, to confess to himself that he would rather see Nan Morgan for one minute than all women else in the world for a lifetime. The other incidents of the evening would have given any ordinary man enough food for reflection—indeed they did force De Spain to realize that his life would hang by a slender thread while he remained at Sleepy Cat and continued to brave the rulers of the slinks.

But this danger, which after all was a portion of his responsibility in freeing his senses from the deprecations of the Calabasas gang, failed to make on him the moving impression of one moment of Nan Morgan's eyes. There was in the whole world nothing he wanted to do so much as in some way to please her—yet it seemed his ill luck to get continually deeper into her bad graces. Every day that he rode across the open country, his eyes turned to the far range and to Music Mountain. The rounded, distant, immutable peak—majestic as the sun, cold as the stars, shrouding in its unknown fastnesses the mysteries of the ages and the secrets of time—meant to him now this mountain girl whom its solitude sheltered and to whom his thoughts continually came back.

Within two weeks he became desperate. He rode the gap trail from Sleepy Cat again and again for miles and miles in the effort to encounter her. He came to know every ridge and hollow on it, every patch and stone between the lava beds and the Bat river. And in spite of the counsel of his associates, who warned him to beware of traps, he spent, under one pretext or another, much of the time either on the stages to and from Calabasas or in the saddle toward Morgan's gap, looking for Nan.

Killing time in this way, after a fruitless ride, his persistence was one day most unexpectedly rewarded. He had ridden through a hot sun from Sleepy Cat to Calabasas, where he had an appointment to meet Scott and Lefever at five o'clock. When De Spain reached the Calabasas barn, McAlpin, the barn boss, was standing in the doorway. "You'd never be coming from Sleepy Cat in the saddle!" exclaimed McAlpin incredulously. De Spain nodded affirmatively as he dismounted. "Hot ride, sir; a hot day," commented McAlpin as he called a man to take the horse, unstrapped De Spain's coat from the saddle, and followed the manager into the office.

The heat was oppressive, and De Spain unbuckled his cartridge belt, slipped his revolver from the holster, mechanically stuck it inside his trousers waistband, hung the heavy belt up under his coat, and, sitting down, called for the stage report and asked whether the new blacksmith had sobered up. When McAlpin had reg-him all minor information called for, De Spain walked with him out into the barn to inspect the horses. Passing the very last of the box-stalls, the manager saw in it a pony. He stopped. This wiry, sleek-looking roan, contentedly munching at the moment some company hay, was Nan Morgan's.

"What's that horse doing here?" demanded De Spain coldly.

Before answering, the barn boss eyed De Spain very carefully to see how the wind was setting, for the pony's presence confessed an infraction of a very particular rule. "You see," he began, cocking at his strict boss from below his visorless cap a questioning Scotch eye, "I like to keep on good terms with that Morgan gang. Some of them can be very ugly. That little pony is Nan Morgan's."

"What's her horse doing here?" asked De Spain.

McAlpin made even the most inconsequential approaches to a statement with a keen and questioning glance. "The girl went up to the Cat on the early stage, sir. She's coming back this afternoon."

"Hot Day, Sir; Hot Ride."

"What is she riding away over here to Calabasas for to take the stage, instead of riding straight into Sleepy Cat?"

Once more McAlpin eyed him carefully. "The girl's been sick."

"Sick?"

"She ain't really fit to ride a step," confided the Scotch boss with growing confidence. "But she's been going up two or three times now to get some medicine from Doc Torpy—that's the way of it. There's a nice girl, sir—in a bunch o' ruffians, I know—though old Duke, she lives with, he ain't a half-bad man except for too many cards. I used to work for him—but I call her a nice girl. Do you happen to know her?"

De Spain had long been on guard. "I've spoken with her in a business way once or twice. I can't really say I know her. Anything sick, Jim?" asked De Spain, walking on down the barn and looking at the horses. It was only the second time since he had given him the job that De Spain had called the barn boss "Jim," and McAlpin answered with the rising assurance of one who realizes he is "in" right. "Not so much as a sore throat in either alley, Mr. De Spain. I try to take care of them, sir."

"What are we paying you, Jim?"

"Twenty-seven a week, sir; pretty heavy work at that."

"We'll try to make it thirty-two after this week."

McAlpin touched his cap. "Thank you kindly, sir. I'm sure. It comes high to live out here, Mr. De Spain."

"What did you say," asked De Spain indifferently, "had been the matter with Nan Morgan?" Her name seemed a whole mouthful to speak, so fearful was he of betraying interest.

"Why, I really didn't say, sir. And I don't know. But from what she says, and the way she coughs, I'm thinking it was a touch of this p-neu-monia, that's going around so much lately, sir."

His listener had already made all arrangements to meet the occasion now presenting itself. Circumstances seemed at last to favor him, and he looked at his watch. The down stage bringing Nan back would be due in less than an hour.

"You know I unintentionally rubbed their backs the wrong way in dragging Sassoon out."

"They're jealous of their power, I know—very jealous."

"This seems the chance to show that I have no real animosity myself toward the outfit."

Since De Spain was not looking at him, McAlpin cocked two keen and curious eyes on the sphinxlike birthmark of the very amiable speaker's face. However, the astute boss, if he wondered, made no comment. "When the stage comes in," continued De Spain quietly, "have the two grays—Lady and Ben—hitched to my own light wagon. I'll drive her over to the gap myself."

"The very thing," exclaimed McAlpin, staring and struggling with his breath.

"In some way I've happened, both times I talked with her, to get in wrong—understand?" McAlpin, with clearing wits, nodded more than once. "No fault of mine; it just happened so. And she may not at first take kindly to the idea of going with me."

"I see."

"But she ought to do it. She will be tired—it's a long, dusty ride for a well woman, let alone one that has been ill."

"So it is, so it is!"

De Spain looked now shamelessly at his ready-witted aid. "See that her pony is lame when she gets here—can't be ridden. But you'll take good care of him and send him home in a few days—get it?"

McAlpin half closed his eyes. "He'll be so lame it would stagger a cowboy to back him ten feet—and never be hurt a mite, neither. Trust me!"

"If she insists on riding something, or even walking home," continued De Spain dubiously, for he felt instinctively that he should have the task of his life to induce Nan to accept any kind of a peace-offering. "I'll ride or walk with her anyway. Can you sleep here tonight, on the hay?"

"Sleep you on a hair mattress, sir. You've got a room right here upstairs; didn't you know that?"

With arrangements so begun, De Spain walked out of doors and looked reflectively up the Sleepy Cat road. One further refinement in his appeal for Nan's favor suggested itself. She would be hungry, possibly faint in the heat and dust, when she arrived. He returned to McAlpin: "Where can I get a good cup of coffee when the stage comes in?"

The Best Philanthropy.

Be sure that you give the poor the aid they most need, though it be your example which leaves them far behind. If you give money, spend yourself with it and do not merely abandon it to them. We make curious mistakes sometimes. Often the poor man is not so cold and hungry as he is dirty and ragged and gross. . . . There are a thousand hacking at the branches of evil to one who is striking at the root, and it may be that he who bestows the largest amount of time and money on the needy is doing the most by his mode of life to produce that misery which he strives in vain to relieve.—Thoreau.

Dinner Stories

"I have a most valuable work to sell, madam," said the book agent. "It tells you how to do everything."

"Does it tell how to get rid of a pestering book agent?" asked the busy woman.

"It does, madam," returned the agent serenely. "It says you should buy something from him."

The sergeants of a certain battery in France sat down to an exceptionally fine dinner, the crowning glory of which was a large pudding. "Seems mighty hard," remarked the sergeant-major, as he vainly tried to stick his fork into it. "Have you boiled us a cannon-ball?"

"Or the regimental football?" asked another.

"Where did you get the flour from?" questioned the sergeant-major again, still struggling vainly. "Where from?" the cook retorted. "From Stove No. 5, of course."

"You did!" roared the quarter-master-sergeant. "Then, hang you, you've made the pudding of Portland cement!"

BED TIME TALES

A Bad Start

NOW MAYBE YOU THINK that it was very foolish for Father Beaver to think something dreadful had happened to Redhead just because he didn't hear him call his cheerful "rap-ap-ap" along with the other birds. Maybe you would call that "jumping at conclusions" too easily.

Well, you are right. He should not have been so ready to believe that something had gone wrong; he should have believed that everything was right and then hunted up his friend. But you mustn't blame Father Beaver too much. You see, in the woods things are very different. So many dreadful things happen suddenly and without a mite of warning that friends can hardly help being a bit anxious. And when Father Beaver failed to hear Redhead call as usual, he supposed Redhead was killed or at least was in dire trouble and, of course, he was anxious.

Bushy Beaver saw his father sitting so still and looking so sad, and he came up and spoke to him. "What's bothering you so, Father Beaver," he said, "can I help?"

"I think something has happened to Redhead," sighed Father Beaver, "and I was wishing I could go and hunt for him."

"Is he so far away?" asked Bushy eagerly.

"He must be," replied Father Beaver, "because if he were nearer, we would have heard his call, I'm sure we would! It will be a long, long search that will find him; a hard, hard quest and I feel that I should not leave my home so long."

Bushy pricked up his damp ears and sat very straight. "Can't I go?" he asked. "I've always wanted to do something big! Do let me go!"

Father Beaver looked at Bushy. "It may take you far from home," he said.

could tell you something that would stop your worrying."

"An owl!" exclaimed Father Beaver. "Pough! I guess I know what I'm talking about! Something dreadful happened to Redhead; I don't need a sleepy owl to tell me that!" And Father Beaver got so angry at the very idea of his being wrong that he made up his mind then and there to let Bushy go on the quest for Redhead. And right then was where he made a mistake. Temperance Talks

(By Temperance Educational League) Webb-Kenyon Law held constitutional. We have before us a synopsis of the opinion recently rendered by the U. S. Supreme Court, in which it upheld the Webb-Kenyon Interstate Shipment Law as constitutional. This decision is received with general interest throughout the country. It is considered a great victory for law enforcement and prohibition. Heretofore it has been the practice of brewers and distillers residing in wet territory to ship liquor to citizens residing in dry states. The dry states may now destroy in an effective manner the liquor traffic within their boundaries, since the Webb-Kenyon Law takes such prohibited liquor shipments out of interstate commerce.

THE WHATCHAMA COLUMN

Horseshadish. Horseshadish is a pernicious, virulent, ill-natured vegetable that has to be watched every minute. Boiled beef is its only excuse. Little is known of horseshadish except that it grows in china pots and loafs around cheap lunch counters at night. Mustard, salt shakers, catsup and cab drivers are its boon companions.
